

Universiti Utara Malaysia Collaborates with Enago to Accomplish Research Goals

The university will have quick access to Enago's first-rate editing team

June 31, 2018, Malaysia: As the Universiti Utara Malaysia focuses on conducting extensive research and promoting a culture of scholarly publications, it has entered into an agreement with Enago, a leading provider of scientific and academic editing services for the global research community, to help them achieve publication success by improving the quality of their manuscripts. Both the Universiti Utara Malaysia and Enago will greatly benefit from the association, as the university works to promote and support research activities among its staff.

Because of the collaboration with Enago, faculty and researchers will have a much stronger chance of publishing their work in reputed international journals, which ultimately will ensure that the university's research objectives are achieved. With researchers getting published worldwide, the university can make certain that its research has far-reaching results.

By offering three levels of support, including a language check, copy editing, and substantive editing, Enago's team of subject matter experts can help Universiti Utara Malaysia researchers and authors meet the high standards necessary for journal submission and publication. In addition, university authors will have access to Enago's scholarly resources, including tips for writing, submission guidelines, and journal selection principles.
